

Bio: An entrepreneur at heart, Peter has always looked for the next challenge. After more than two decades in academia – with publications, national awards, and international academic leadership experience – Peter wanted to build an independent consulting firm that could integrate his passion for people, practical Stoic philosophy, and evidence-based emotional intelligence development. His conviction that good, careful work can make lives better and more fulfilling have been at the core of his efforts to point people and organizations in the right direction. Building on his skills as a dialogue facilitator (he is a UN Habitat certified facilitator), Peter specializes in helping executives and leaders, teams, and organizations notice, engage, and empower emotional intelligence and mindful leadership strategies in order to increase effectiveness, reduce conflict, promote diversity & inclusion, and build healthy workplace cultures. Peter is certified with Genos International, the Center for Executive Coaching and ICF.